

9 IN RACE FOR G. O. P. MAYOR NOMINATION

CONGRESS MOVES TO ENACT GIANT RELIEF PROGRAM

Adjournment Tonight Set As Goal by Lawmakers; Face Busy Session

REACH COMPROMISE ON VETERANS' CUTS

Public Works-Industrial Control Bill Passed By Senate Body

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Adjournment tonight was the goal as congress strove to complete, in just one session the monumental emergency program of President Roosevelt, greatest legislative production of peace time.

Senate and house were called together early, facing at least fourteen hours of tremendous work before the three-month term could be ended at midnight.

Pass Industrial Bill

The senate's passage late last night of the $3,000,000,000 public works-industrial control bill, and the agreement of house Democratic leaders to the chief executive's compromise proposal on veterans cuts had made this final adjournment possible, but there was such a maze of parliamentary procedure to untangle that unusual unanimity was required in both senate and house, unless the close was to be delayed to Monday.

Headlining the day's tasks were: A conference agreement on the much-amended bill; house approval of its leaders' acceptance of President Roosevelt's compromise on veterans' allowances, to be followed by conference agreement with the senate on the whole bill; passage by both senate and house of a list of eleven hour appropriations to operate the new governmental machinery created by the session; approval by the senate of scores of presidential nominations, big and little.

Countless smaller jobs also waited cleaning up.

Approve Other Measures

Under President Roosevelt's pressure for closing before the London conference begins on Monday, in quick succession, both the house and senate yesterday had stamped final approval on the $2,000,000,000 home mortgage, railroad reorganization and gasoline-electricity tax-postage reduction bills, and sent all three to the White House.

This tax measure is estimated to raise $125,000,000 toward balancing the budget, and gives President Roosevelt power to reduce first-class postage from three to two cents, besides itself cutting local letter rates from three to two cents.

HARTER BRANCH ROBBED OF $10,000

Four Men Hold Up Louisville Bank and Flee In New Auto

(By Associated Press)

CANTON, June 10.—Four men dressed in conventional rural clothes held up the Louisville branch of the George D. Harter bank of Canton today and escaped with $10,000. The seven persons in the branch were held at bay with revolvers and a sawed off shotgun.

Three of the men—one of them carrying a market basket over his arm, entered the bank and took cash from the two tellers' windows. The money was shoved into the basket.

The fourth man waited outside in a small new motor car. The motor was running. The three men entered the car, and it sped off toward the north.

Sheriff George Daily immediately notified officers at Akron Youngstown, and other cities northward of the robbery and attempted to cut off the flight of the robbers.

The men were all between 20 and 30. One wore a straw hat, all the others wore caps, and all had overalls.

M'GARVEY FIGHT TO ESCAPE PEN BROUGHT TO END

Hanover Township Farmer Must Serve One to 20-Year Sentence

SUPREME COURT DENIES REVIEW

Arrested April 23, 1931, In Shooting of Walter Ingledue

LISBON, June 10.—Thomas McGarvey, Hanover township farmer convicted of manslaughter and sentenced by Judge W. F. Lones to serve from one to 20 years in the Ohio penitentiary, will have to serve the sentence, the supreme court having overruled a motion to review the case on error from the appellate court of this district. A certified copy of this entry has been received by Clerk of Courts John A. Noble.

Can Go No Further

"We can go no farther, as no federal question is involved, and this is the end of the lawsuit," Attorney George T. Farrell, of counsel for McGarvey said today.

McGarvey was arrested by former Sheriff W. J. Barlow April 23, 1931, for shooting Walter Ingledue, while Ingledue and several companions were visiting at the Speidel farm, of which McGarvey was in charge.

An affidavit was filed against McGarvey in a lower court April 25, 1931, charging him with murder in the second degree, and he was held for the next grand jury under $10,000 bond. An indictment was returned against McGarvey and the same amount of bond was fixed by Judge W. F. Lones which was furnished.

When this case first went to trial, a jury returned a verdict of manslaughter against McGarvey, and a new trial was granted on error.

At the second trial a manslaughter verdict was also returned, and the case then went to the court of appeals, where the lower court was sustained. A motion to file a petition in error in the supreme court followed, and this has been overruled.

Prepare Journal Entry

A journal entry has been prepared by Prosecuting Attorney George L. Lafferty and John E. Baunkecht, as special counsel, which is to be presented to Judge Lones next week for approval, ordering the sentence to be carried into execution.

The journal entry, which is also to be approved by counsel for McGarvey, reads:

"The defendant in this case having been sentenced at a former term of this court, and the sentence having been then suspended, on motion of the defendant, and said judgment having been sustained by the court of appeals, and the supreme court having overruled the defendant's motion for leave to file a petition in error, and accordingly no writ of error upon said judgment having been allowed, it is therefore ordered the said sentence be now carried into execution."

Use Castor Bean In Garden Fight; City Is Sold Out

Did you know that it is virtually impossible today to buy a castor bean in Salem?

It's a fact—the Salem chapter of the Red Cross says so, and the chapter has been responsible, to a large extent, for this situation—all, however in a good cause.

It developed at the Wooster experiment station that castor beans are a very effective weapon in fighting the bean beetle—one of the destructive "gangsters of the garden."

The advice of the station is to plant the castor beans at intervals of several feet along the rows of beans. The theory is, the Wooster station points out, that the beetles prefer the castor beans; they fill up on them ravenously and then proceed to die.

The Salem Red Cross, desiring to aid community gardeners and others, as well, has been distributing this information as rapidly as possible. As a result, there isn't a castor bean on sale in the city today.

However, one store expects a new shipment Monday and others probably will be receiving additional lots, also.

TUBERCULOSIS CASES REPORTED

Lack of Money Makes Proper Care Impossible, Says Board

The first meeting of the Salem board of health with Dr. R. T. Holzbach as health commissioner, succeeding the late Dr. T. T. Church, was held at Dr. Holzbach's office, East State st., Friday night.

Nineteen births, 12 male and seven female, were reported by Holzbach for May. Deaths totalled 16, with seven male and nine female.

Dr. Holzbach reported 15 cases of tuberculosis in the city. Board members expressed regret that lack of finances makes impossible the provision of institutional and proper care for the victims.

There were 11 cases of chicken pox, two each of scarlet fever and whooping cough and one each of pneumonia, typhoid fever, erysipelas and measles here last month.

Sanitary Officer William Roach reported inspections of stores, dairies, meat markets and found these institutions in good sanitary condition.

VOTERS GIVEN EIGHT BATTLES ON TWO TICKETS

Ralph W. Reed Last to file In Republican Mayoralty Race

30 CANDIDATES ON PRIMARY LIST

24 Republicans, Six Democrats Seek Municipal Nominations

With nine candidates seeking the Republican mayoralty nomination, an intensely interesting battle of ballots was in prospect for Salem voters when they go to the city's polling places in the Tuesday, Aug. 8, primaries.

Eight contests, chief among which is the G. O. P. mayoralty fight, appear on the Republican and Democratic tickets. The period allowed prospective office-seekers to file petitions with the county election board expired at 6:30 p. m. Friday.

30 Candidates Listed

A total of 30 candidates, 24 Republicans and six Democrats, filed petitions.

Contests appear on the G. O. P. ticket for nominations as mayor, solicitor, treasurer, first ward council and councilman-at-large, while the two Democratic tickets involve rivals seeking mayoralty and treasurer nominations.

The filing of a petition by Ralph W. Reed yesterday boosted the list of G. O. P. mayoralty aspirants to nine. Others in the race will be: John M. Davidson, the incumbent, two former mayors, George E. Russell and R. R. Johnson, and Donald J. Burcaw, George Harroff, Charles D. Baker, James A. Probert and Harry W. Keselmir.

Norman Phillips and R. John Taylor are the opponents in the Democratic mayoralty contest. The only other Democratic fight is that between Marion S. Hanna and Vincent Judge who are candidates for treasurer. A. E. Beardmore, Democrat, recently appointed acting postmaster, is not a candidate for reelection.

City Solicitor Cecil K. Scott is opposed for renomination by Atty's Lozier Caplan, Harry V. Robinson and R. J. Chalfant are rivals for the G. O. P. treasurer nomination.

Council Contests Loom

City Auditor Karl L. Webster is unopposed for renomination while John T. Burns is without opposition in his candidacy for the council presidency nomination. Both are Republicans.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal. June 10.—The Baers are going strong. "Bugs" Baer is the champion humorist and Max the champion boxer. This fellow Schmeling, however, deserves a lot of credit. He has from the start here conducted himself both in and out of the ring in a mighty commendable way that has brought nothing but credit on his country.

COOPERATION, THE KEYNOTE

Those who have been fearful of the possibilities contained in the industrial recovery act must take into account the importance of men in its administration. In this, as in several other parts of President Roosevelt's program for national rehabilitation, it is not possibilities, but probabilities which are most important.

The probabilities of the industrial recovery act were made more definite this week by the report that the President would ask Alfred P. Sloan, Walter C. Teague and Gerard Swope to serve on a board of control. This seems to be a guarantee against control of the power by bureaucrats. These men, each a leader in his field of industry, could be depended on to preserve a proper balance.

The fact that they have been mentioned in advance of the bill's passage is a further sign that the administration ardently wishes to make cooperation the keynote of this phase of its program. Thus, the objective would not be government control of industry but government's extension to industry of the privilege of self-control. Government's punitive power would not be used on industry as a whole, but on those units refusing to comply with industry's programs for its own rehabilitation.

There are encouraging signs that many branches of industry are taking the cue early and getting their affairs in order. The rubber industry, for instance, has taken steps to organize itself. The clay products industry is on the field and at work. Steel, automobiles, oil and coal are expected to be ready to participate fully in the cooperative effort to provide employment by a more rational ordering of their affairs.

Men administer laws. What they think and do about the letter of legislation is as important many times as the legislation itself. It is obvious that President Roosevelt can do things with the power which the people have given him which the people never would tolerate. It is not at all obvious that he has such intentions. He would prefer the initiative to come from those who have delegated power to him. He seeks self-control by co-operation, not control through force.

NEW INTEREST

Selection of Walter Johnson, one of the great baseball players of all time, as manager of the Cleveland Indians is a pleasant surprise. He will give new interest to the fortunes of the slipping Indians.

Few commentators will care to predict that Johnson will be able to do what his predecessor, Roger Peckinpaugh, hasn't been able to do—lead the Indians to more victories. Both men are known to be capable, but it seems important to bear in mind that neither of them is noted for possession of the strong aggressiveness which enabled Joe McCarthy, present Yankee manager, to lead a last-place team on the field breathing defiance when he managed the Cubs years ago.

Whatever a manager is able to do, he can't stand at the plate nor play in the field for his men. Peckinpaugh's dismissal for being unable to make the Indians bring up their batting average and correct their erratic playing is one of the ironies of organized baseball. Both he and Johnson have been around the lots long enough to take it philosophically. Foremost among the new manager's well-wishers probably will be Peckinpaugh, who knows how much luck his successor will need.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—A report just filed here shows that Salt Lake County's charity expense took a quarter of a million dollar leap in 1932, as compared with 1931. Outlays totaled $387,302, an increase of $254,866.

What Others Say

RECORDERS' BILL NEXT

There hasn't been such horns-blowing in many moons as this wholesale term-extender movement before the legislature.

It is a plain case of the county officers in office going into cahoots with the legislators in office to keep the county officers in office an additional four years.

If that isn't an attempt to rob the voters of their right to determine who shall administer their government, we would like to know what would be.

With these obvious and heated truths in mind, it ought not to take the legislature long to make up its mind to repeal the recorders' term extender, which was slipped over while no one was looking.

Governor White has vetoed the clerks' bill, though he did it in a message that was full of sad, sad feelings over having to do what the cruel Republican attorney general had ruled.

The governor knows very well that all these bills are bad measures, part of an unsavory piece of political chicanery. Any grief he feels ought to be reflex, shed upon himself for having signed the recorders' bill in the first place.

But the governor will come along. He may utter a few sobs for the special consumption of the disappointed clerks, but he knows better than to veto a repealer of the recorders' term-extender. —Columbus Citizens.

The Stars Say:

For Sunday, June 11

Sunday's horoscope may not be deemed a particularly important one or hold sign of much happiness or achievement. Irritability, vexations, impetuosity and also small losses, indulgences or extravagances seem to combine to upset the happy current of a peaceful Sabbath. Employment or friction with superiors also menace.

Those whose birthday it is may have wisely to take affairs in hand to sidestep a year of petty annoyances, anxieties and disappointments unless they keep a firm grip on tendencies to irritabilities, impetuous moves and rash and quarrelsome words, which may but aggravate difficult situations. Be careful not to offend employers or superiors, safeguard the money and refrain from sharp speech. A child born on this day may have a keen mind and quick tongue, may be generous, impetuous, fond of taking high chances.

Notable nativity: Richard Strauss, composer.

For Monday, June 12

Monday's astrological forecast is fraught with high promise for those in the employment of others, who are encouraged to seek preferment, promotion or favors from superiors with confidence. There is augury of return for hard work and steadfastness, with incentive to accumulate real possessions and sound position. Changes may benefit and the subtle mental operations may incite to gain by shrewd, intriguing or strategic methods, but sign writings with precaution.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of favoritism, honors or advancement from employers or superiors, and may also win through their own mental attitude of strategem, diplomacy or intrigue. Change seems imminent, but sign all documents with precaution. Private matters may give slight concern.

A child born on this day may have a deep and subtle mentality, winning in the favor or co-operation of employers or elderly persons or institutions. It may lean toward science, invention or deep research.

Notable nativity: John McCormack, singer.

WICHITA, Kan.—A weather kiosk, which has stood in front of the old postoffice here for nearly 20 years, will be sold at auction. But the high bidder will have some difficulty in taking away his property, since the structure is imbedded in concrete and iron supports will have to be sawed apart to remove it. In spite of this difficulty, numerous inquiries have been received about the kiosk. One man wants it for a rabbit hutch.

Don't Neglect Child's Pains

It is often difficult to discover the cause of illness in an adult. It is doubly hard to do so in a child too young accurately to describe his discomfort or to locate the seat of his ailment.

For example, a child who suffers from a stomach-ache may be the victim of one of many serious disorders. Too often parents disregard the seriousness of this complaint. They think it is no more than an "upset stomach."

This negligence would not be so bad if the parent did not make the further mistake of giving castor oil, or some other strong purgative, in an effort to cure the stomach. Let me warn you against the use of castor oil or any other laxative when vague abdominal pain is present.

May Be Appendicitis
Why do I object to the use of a laxative when the child complains of a pain in his "tummy"? Because the pain may be due to an inflamed or infected appendix.

Pain is nature's warning. The inflammation may subside if the infected tissues are kept quiet and not irritated. But, if a dose of castor oil is given, the intestines are stimulated into activity and the appendix may rupture.

In a recent survey of cases of ruptured appendix it was found that in most instances the rupture could be traced to the use of castor oil. Everyone knows that a ruptured appendix is more difficult to deal with. Even though surgery is resorted to, the victim of a ruptured appendix runs a stormy and possibly a fatal course.

The pain is not always due to appendicitis. It may come from an intestinal obstruction. This occurs when parts of the intestine become twisted upon each other. Due to this twist, the supply of blood is cut off, the cells of the intestine die, and gangrene results. When this occurs, time is precious and the life of the small victim can only be saved by early recognition of the disorder and immediate operation.

He told the scholars that President Roosevelt whistles when in trouble and counseled them to do likewise.

I do not wish to upset you. My desire is to be helpful. I am sure you will not forget it is unsafe to give castor oil for such symptoms or to trust to home medication.

If in Doubt, Call Doctor

Of course, abdominal pain may not be of a serious nature. In the majority of cases it is not. It may be no more than old-fashioned colic.

Colic can usually be traced to the eating of indigestible food. In these cases, diarrhea is likely to be present and the physician will have no thought of demanding operation. But, do not forget that even though you know your child has been eating green apples or other foods difficult to digest, the pain may be due to appendicitis and not to simple colic. It is usually the taking of this type of food that precipitates an attack of appendicitis.

Please bear in mind that stomach-ache or abdominal pain is not always due to trouble in the digestive organs. The symptoms may arise from remote causes, such as decayed teeth, sore throat, diseased spine, or a focus of infection somewhere else. Each case demands different treatment. This treatment can only be determined by a physician. Do not rely upon your own judgment in correcting these disturbances, for delay may be dangerous.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, June 10—I have been cleaning out an old desk today, a rickety affair fit only for kindling wood. It was bought second-hand with the first check—$6—earned as a practitioner of belles-lettres. The yellowing contents seemed mostly a bundle of hellish heart-aches.

Four warped drawers were filled with stuff no one would buy. The nearest a manuscript in the lot came to success was one that held this brief from an editor, by a ship: "We were tempted to buy this but it lacks something. Why not try again?"

It's a matter of record, that six more tries were made but none made the grade. One I noticed began hoity-toity: "The Hudson rose grey like a coil of blown smoke." I read on trying to catch some fugitive vein of talent. It was not there and I freely forgive the editors.

There was a long poem, too, that had been coiled into a disappointed wad. It must have been written about the time Vachel Lindsay was beginning to be heard and expressed a ballad for Lindsay's effects. Also a caustic cutting from Don Marquis's column about another columnist that was torpedoed after one edition.

One forlorn essay parodying the meandering Michael Arlen style that flared into such sudden hoopla was returned by Harper's Bazaar without customary rejection slip, but there was an epistolary stung just the same. The editor had written: "This is fair parody but poor essay." A consolation was comparing it with another note among my lures and penates of three years ago which reads: "Your piece for Harper's Bazaar rings the bell. It's a pip!" One of the few instances where comparison was no odious.

In a cubby-hole were cached glorious twinges in the shape of brief messages about nothing in particular from K. C. B. C. L. Edson, Wurra Wurra McLaughlin, S. Jay Kaufman and Robert Emmet MacAlarney, popular writing folk of that particular day. Also a frayed and yellowing Briggs cartoon caricaturing my lantern-jawed phiz and several by H. T. Webster along the same line in the old New York Globe.

A seared address book containing these: George V. Speed, Sedalia, Mo.; Phil Simms, 121 rue Montmartre, Paris; Sophie Irene Loeb, B'way at 56th street; Dr. F. A. Cook, Polar Publishing Co., Steinway Hall; Charles R. Barnes, Melrose and the Boardwalk Atlantic City, N. J.; Grove Patterson, the Journal, Detroit; Joe Platt, West Third street, Cleveland, O. and Erkin Essig, 29 Liberty street, N. Y. and Ziegfeld was paying so much for ballyhooing his Frolic. Get in touch with Pop Rosenthal! A note from Herbert Swope: there was no place on the World staff. Yet in later years he was gracious enough to tell me he wished he had given me a chance.

A polite note, too, from Lotta Faust, saying she would receive me in her dressing room at the Globe for an interview Tuesday after the play. It sounded warm and jolly but her manager froze when I confessed being without preferment—a free lance trying to hawk a piece about Miss Faust to a Sunday section. He was sorry but, etc. I remember leaving feeling frightfully third rate.

Evidently my sustained enthusiasm for Maugham's "Of Human Bondage" was in full sail, for there were ticklers to remind Ed Simpson, Jim Scott and Daddy Beecler to read it. Cheap envelopes with my address in glaring red reminded me of juvenile days of syndication. One conceit was a faked cable address. It was a bit of lug I thought smacked of genius. After the years it is ludicrously sappy. Not only was the European trade a vain hope, the American clientele consisted of the Bridgeport, Ct. Post, Toledo Times and Piqua, O. Call. Those were all.

Also a vernal tug and skyey feeling in a blurred package of nascent garden seeds. I cannot recall the gardening urge. There was a suggestion of philandering, however, inked in one corner. It read: "Cathedral 5-542. Ask for Miss

Where Eleven Escaped Death in Air-Liner Crash

Looking at this picture, one is inclined to disagree with the cynics who assert that the age of miracles has passed. This big twin-motored air-liner carried nine passengers and two pilots when it crashed a few minutes after taking off from Newark (N. J.) Airport. Although the undercarriage of the huge craft was entirely demolished, only three of the occupants suffered slight injury. The crash is believed to have been the result of one of the motors going "dead" while the craft was climbing.

Verdict of $11,835

Returned by Jury

LISBON, June 10.—One of the largest personal injury verdicts ever returned by a jury here is that for $11,835 awarded by a jury in the case of George Wines, as administrator of the estate of Cecil Wines, against The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. One juror, Sarah Walker, of Salem, did not sign the verdict.

This case was the result of the death of Cecil Wines when an automobile in which he was riding ran into an engine of the defendant company at the crossing on State Highway No. 7 in 1928.

Suit was filed against the Pennsylvania company by the late W. A. O'Grady of Wellsville, and it first went to trial April 25, 1932, when a jury failed to agree. The second trial started last Tuesday. Both trials continued four days.

The petition sought $25,000 for the death of Cecil Wines and $600 for the loss of an automobile.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

HOME CLEANING OF SLIP COVERS

It isn't such a terribly difficult task to wash slip covers at home. This job is performed in many households and very well done it is, too. Especially if your house has a yard wherein drying operations can be carried out. And if a fine day is chosen so that a goodly part of the drying can be done out of doors, it should be well with the slip covers.

Covers, and drapes if they are being done, should be well shaken and thoroughly dusted before washing is commenced. Have ready plenty of hot soapy water and see to it that no strong soaps or caustic powders are employed. Wash the articles one at a time and be sure to rinse each twice—once in warm water to remove all traces of soap, and once in cold water to set the colors. If the covers are of chintz you will find that they will wash easier than cretonne. This is because the dirt is mostly on the surface. Cretonne will need lots of extra rubbing, you'll find. If you wish to stiffen the chintz after washing, use thick, boiling water starch. When lukewarm, dip the chintz into it, wring out again and hang up until it is dry enough to iron.

Care in Ironing

The ironing needs plenty of care, otherwise the fabrics will be full of wrinkles and creases. For chintz, a hot, heavy iron must be used. The material should be ironed on the right side with particular attention paid to the area in the vicinity of the seams. Cretonne covers are best folded when partly dry and left for a few hours before ironing. If they are not required very stiff, it is a good idea to dip them in water in which rice has been boiled. This should be done after their final rinsing, for the quantity of starch present in the rice water will be sufficient to give the desired stiffness.

And all covers should be very, very thoroughly aired before being replaced on the furniture. With these few rules and a lot of precaution, even the very amateur housewife, ought to be able to turn out a very creditable job.

A BIT OF INGENUITY, TIME, WILL REVIVE OLD FURNITURE

Experts in interior decorating show us many a short cut to charm and beauty achieved with minimum expenditure. It is wonderful what can be done with ingenuity, a flair for the artistic and unusual and a few cans of paint. Otherwise impossible and useless furniture can be brought up to date. Even old pieces can be rendered modernistic, if properly tackled.

Fixing Up The Highboy

If your spare room or your attic houses old highboy, bring it into the open. Here is how one resourceful person tackled the problem. First the highboy was taken apart, and the lower part because a dressing table. The upper part was given a bracket feet made of matching wood and matching top; were purchased for both pieces. And so, out of a discarded piece of furniture, quite unsuitable to a small metropolitan apartment, there was evolved two small useful pieces, a dressing table and a small chest of drawers. Find a good, resourceful carpenter and you will be able to do all sorts of things with old furniture.

If you want a desk for your room and do not want to go to a great deal of expense, we would suggest that you pick up somewhere an ordinary office typewriter desk, the type with drawers on one side, with a pull out typewriter top to the left, giving a goodly sized flat surface when closed. Paint this an off-white, with lines of gilt or off-black, and you will have a desk that is modernistic, but not too different to fit into any dainty room. The painting job isn't difficult. First paint a flat white, then apply the glaze that gives the off-white effect.

Mixing the Glaze

You can easily mix this most effective glaze yourself. Mix a small quantity of raw amber, a small quantity of black, mixed very thin with turpentine. Apply the glaze with a brush. If you are transforming, say, an old chest of drawers by painting it with this off-white mixture, leave the paint brush marks showing. It is very effective. Why not do this with old chests of drawers? It will give them a new lease on life and will give you ever so much more storage space.

SUMMER RUGS NOW OFFERED IN NEW FABRICS AND COLORS

Now is the time to invest in a complete set of summer rugs. Never were they more alluring, useful or inexpensive, as any visit to your favorite store will disclose. String and stringlike fabrics are favored, while cotton fabrics are also ready awaiting our measured tread or quick step.

The colors are lovely, too. One new rug is of heavy dead-white hemp rope. It can also be obtained in almost any color, but the dead white is simply stunning in a room with gay hangings and bright summer furniture. Nice for bedrooms, too. It is resilient to the tread. Another weave is a lighter hemp rope, woven in loops, somewhat reminiscent of the weave of a thick bath towel, but of course, much coarser, sturdier and of deeper pile. In fact, everything in the summer rug line this year seems to be of string, copying perhaps the use of string in sartorial accessories, string hats, bags and gloves.

It is perfectly amazing to see what the designers and weavers have done with hemp. A piece of hemp rope itself is heavy and hard. Yet when woven it has an elasticity that makes it an ideal floor covering, light, yet firm. Try these string rugs, you'll be keen about them. They are cool in looks, too.

Choice of Colors, Too

One house has put out a soft cotton string carpeting, made of string about a quarter of an inch thick, that is just as soft, yet as springy to the tread as can be. This comes in various colors with contrasting borders, or all in one color, the off-whites and pastel shades being especially appropriate for summer homes or for town homes that want to look summery. One grand color scheme is in solid dark blue with narrow red stripes decorated with a line of white, very different from the usual summer colorings, but surprisingly good.

Another string rug is done in gay plaid patterns. Nice in white and blue or white and green, both cool to the eye. Most of these string rugs are fairly moderate in price and are so well woven that there should be little danger of them becoming unraveled and tangling up your toes in yards of string.

Of course, if you don't want to try the new rugs, you'll find that the old standbys, grass, fiber and grass, and the tweed and homespun mixtures are as nice as ever. And you'll find them awaiting you in new patterns and color schemes, too.

PENTECOSTAL

East Pershing and Penn. G. E. Doby, pastor.

Sunday school at 2 p. m. Leo A. Smith, Supt.; Mrs. Anna Pierce, Bible class leader; Mrs. Anna Schenker, Young People's leader.

Our lesson for this Sabbath is taken from Mark: 15 chapter, 1-47. The topic for the lesson being: "The Lord Jesus Christ on the Cross."

The leading thought brought to us in this lesson is that the Lord Jesus Christ died for the sins of the world.

Let us enter into this thought as we study this lesson that our Lord was not the victim of circumstances and He was not overcome with evil without His consent but He even escaped in at least three ways, one supernatural, two natural.

First—He could have asked His Father for legions of angels to destroy all His enemies in a moment of time. But His knowledge of and regard for the divine love of sinners kept Him from doing this.

Second—He could have escaped by a little diplomacy when Pilate had sought long and earnestly to find a way to release Him.

Third—He could have turned the mob in His favor. Just by lifting His kindly head and saying a few mighty words to them as never man could say them. He would have had the fickle mob on His side.

They would have arisen and freed Him from the chief priests. But He was kept from appealing to the people by His love for them. He must save them and if He would do so He could have saved Himself.

If you have no Sunday school home, you come and study this lesson with us. Preaching at 3 o'clock and 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

Thursday evening song and praise service in the church at 7:30 p. m. We invite the public to all of our services. Come and worship where the hand of fellowship awaits you. ### HOLY TRINITY ENGLISH LUTHERAN

East State St. at Woodland Ave. Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.

Festival of the Holy Trinity Sunday school—9:45 (Mark 8:27-38). Paul Wilms, Supt.

There must be a public confession of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. The substance of faith may be a very personal affair, but no one must be ashamed to express this faith before the world. Jesus closely questioned the disciples on this matter. He was anxious to know what the world thought about him. He was more anxious to know what they had been very closely associated with him. Their opinion and judgment were more valuable to him. Jesus' religion must go beyond confession. There are many opportunities to show one's loyalty to Christ. His teachings even though they may condemn us in our selfish and personal ideas, must be closely followed and defended as the Word of life. Religion is more than word mouth. It is confession worked out in daily living. These two parts must run along in parallel lines. Confession and life must be consistent one with the other. There are demands for our loyalty from many sides. Never must our loyalty to Christ be second to other interests. It must come first. The conception that one has of Christ will direct and shape one's faithfulness to Him.

The morning worship period is united with the Children's Day program, at 10:30. The sermonette by the pastor will be on the subject, "Fruits of the Air."

This Sunday is set aside as Trinity Sunday in the church year. Thus the emphasis is to be placed upon the doctrine of the Holy Trinity. God is one, but in God, there are three persons, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. The Holy Scriptures are the authority for this teaching. The Apostles' Creed as confessed by the whole Catholic church puts forth the doctrine of the Trinity God.

No Luther League meeting will be held because of the baccalaureate services.

"FIRST NIGHT MURDER"

By F.G. PARKE

COPYRIGHT 1931, BY DIAL PRESS, INC.,—DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"A woman rose violently to her feet, her eyes dilated with horror. She screamed again."

CHAPTER I

The second-act curtain rang down on "Phantom Fingers." Rousing itself from its traditional lethargy, the first night audience surprised itself with an impressive volley of applause. The Olympic theater was generously papered, the customary number of complimentary tickets having been dispensed to first-night celebrities, great and near-great.

Still, there was a ring of spontaneity about the furore that spelled "Hit" to the practiced ears of the speculators lounging at the back of the auditorium. Unless the third act disappointed—and this, in view of the young playwright's obvious ability, was a remote contingency—"Phantom Fingers" was all set for a long and lusty run.

Gaufrault and confident, the cast took its final bows. The house lights flashed on. Almost to a man the first night audience rose and surged into the lobby. They overflowed on to the sidewalk outside the Olympic theater, resplendent, immaculate, eager to see and to be seen.

Enjoy Notice

Men and women groped for cigarettes. They blew smoke and sophisticated patter into each other's faces with impartial zeal. Celebrities elbowed each other, squeezing through doors, elaborately unaware of the excited whispers of the lesser lights. Passers-by paused to point, nudge and gaze like onlookers at some strange menagerie.

Adolph Hertz, producer of the play, stood just inside the lobby, acknowledging the bouquets of acquaintances with a self-satisfied smirk. His head protruded from the white shirt front like a coarse red cabbage. The exhausted condition of his collar bore witness to the ferocity of Adolph's not unnatural emotion. His restless eye spied Police Commissioner Ingram working his way steadily toward the outer doors. Hertz pushed around and hailed him:

"Well, Mr. Commissioner," his excited voice held more than a trace of foreign accent, "anyway, it's clean dia time, ain't it? Adolph's conscience had not always been so lily-white. The Police Commissioner laughed.

Guessing

"Good show, Hertz. It's still got me guessing."

"You ain't seen nuthin' yet."

Ingram disappeared through the outer door.

On the sidewalk a small group of celebrity-hunters were staring at Margaret Manning, Broadway's illustrious dramatic actress. Apparently unaware of the excitement she was causing, Mrs. Manning was chatting and laughing with a few of the elect. Her famous Mona Lisa smile greeted the Police Commissioner. She introduced a friend.

"That's Erda Carruthers Manning's wife," whispered someone. "You know, the Carruthers who wrote 'Love Failed' me!"

"Making Up"

"Yeah, and that short, grey-haired man's George Lansdowne, the critic. Guess Manning's making up to him so he'll give Sheila a good notice. Wonder how she feels now that her daughter's old enough to step into her shoes?"

Sheila Manning, daughter of the star, was making her stage debut in the ingenue role of "Phantom Fingers." But what ever Mrs. Manning's feelings may have been, they were not reflected on her serene and handsome features. Tall and distinguished, there was an air of almost classic nobility about her presence. A compelling dignity.

A few yards away on the sidewalk fluttered Bonnie Adair, the peevish fluffiness of Hollywood's famous film flapper presented an elaborate contrast. Blazing with diamonds and enveloped in an ermine cloak, the diminutive motion picture star was getting thoroughly annoyed by the overshadowing popularity of Mrs. Manning. Her bright vermilion lips drooped in a becoming pout.

True Rumors

Waiter Winchell, in that day's column, had sprung the tidings that Bonnie and "Gats" Perino were "on fire." He had even hinted that they might be "altar-bound." The rumor appeared substantiated, for towering above the fluffy little star was the notorious racketeer, who, according to the same lightning conductor, "had as many strings as a harp" when it came to pulling wires with the Powers that Be.

"Gats" was in immaculate evening clothes, a gardenia in his button hole, a Corona in the process of disintegration between his strong white teeth. He had large ears, a protruding jaw and his huge arms hung to his knees. He looked like a chimpanzee.

The Summons

In the midst of the soaring babel of conversation the buzzer sounded peremptorily. The tide turned. The bustling began anew, this time in the direction of the auditorium doors.

A long sax-blue limousine drew noiselessly up before the Olympic theater. Two middle-aged men in evening dress sat in the tonneau. Whispers broke out among the lingering spectators as they recognized in the car Julius Brandt and Matthew Burton, co-producers of the most famous musical comedy hits in recent years. The shorter and slimmer of the two alighted. With his hand still on the tonneau door he waved to Lansdowne, who had paused for a final word with the Police Commissioner.

"Hello, George," he called out. "Why, hello, Brandt." Lansdowne and Ingram stroled over to the car and shook hands with the two men, the critic saving to the man inside the car, "Hello Burton. Bit late, aren't you? The third act's just going on. Missed a good show."

"Sure is," responded Brandt. "Burton and I saw it at the tryout. We got tied up over a movie deal and I couldn't get away sooner. How's Sheila doing?"

The Intellectual

"Not bad," returned the critic. "Doubt if she'll ever make a second Margaret Manning, though."

"Aren't you coming in, Burton?" The Police Commissioner turned to the man inside the car. Burton shook his head with a smile. His face contrasted pleasantly with the coarse sensual features of his partner. He was thin and intellectual. His eyes were a mild blue. Gold-rimmed pince-nez on a black cord emphasized his academic look. For two decades stage aspirants who knew their Broadway had inquired discreetly for Burton before they asked for Brandt.

"I've got a spare seat," offered Lansdowne. "Oh, I forgot. The Olympic's a Brandt and Burton house anyway. I guess you've got your own house seats."

"Thanks, George, but I'm due on the radio in ten minutes," replied Burton. "I'm introducing some of our people on the international hook-up over KZY tonight. You know, let's get together for dinner some night next week. I'll give you a call. See you after a bit, J. B. I ought to be through soon after eleven. Bye, Ingram." He waved his hand. The sax-blue limousine glided off in the direction of the Times Square maletrom.

The straggling remnants of the crowd were pushing their way into the auditorium. Ingram hurried after them. Brandt and Lansdowne followed at a more leisurely pace. They had almost gained the entrance when the doors behind them were pulled open violently. A young man in evening clothes appeared, accompanied by a woman of considerably mature years. Her hair was violently hennaed. Her make-up was startling in its pallor. It looked like parchment.

Brandt bowed to her politely and was rewarded by a hostile look from under a pair of heavily mascaraed lashes. Lansdowne suppressed a grin. The situation appealed to his sardonic humor. It had all the ingredients of palpitating melodrama—the ten-twenty-third variety. He visualized the situation for the stage. Famous Broadway producer encounters wife from whom he is estranged at fashionable first night in company with her latest. These Lansdowne wondered whether there were any truth in the rumors of an impending divorce and the reports of the producer's sentimental interest in Sheila Manning.

Resentful

Brandt stood aside to allow the pair to precede him into the theater. Cora Brandt swept past him without a word. But her companion Gavin Field, stopped short in front of the producer. His face was flushed and his eyes bright. Obviously he had been drinking and his libations had brought him to a stage of untenable resentment. Field was a leading man of little account. He had also, from time to time, collaborated on plays. These Lansdowne had privately and publicly decided, were of even less account. Field's fist shot out. It wavered, uncertainly, within a few inches of Brandt's definitely hooked nose.

"Listen to me, J. B. You're nothin' but a cheap four-flusher, that's what you are!" Field's comments had a glibly obscenity about them and he swung a little. "You're a swiner, that's what you are, just a common swiner. Ill get even with you, you rat, if it's the last thing I do."

Brandt stepped away from the menacing fist. His bland expression was being rapidly replaced by one of intense annoyance. Lansdowne placed himself between the two.

"Here, Field, remember where you are," he said curtly, taking the actor by the arm and pushing him toward the auditorium door. "You can't start a fight here. It isn't going to do you any good, remember. Come on, the last act will be 'n in a minute."

Still mumbling imprecations, the actor allowed himself to be shepherded into the theater. The house lights were still on. Cora was waiting for him. She spoke to him in a low voice and they went down the aisle together.

Aisle Seats

Brandt, whose composure was rapidly returning to him, strolled down the aisle, nodding here and there. He had his regular house seats at the Olympic, C2 and 4, on the left center aisle. As he turned to place his hat and coat on the chair beside him, he recognized, sitting next but one to him, the statuette figure of Mrs. Manning. She was talking earnestly to Erda Carruthers who sat on her other side, apparently unaware of the producer. Brandt turned away hastily. He had his own reasons for not wanting to catch Margaret Manning's eye just then.

The producer's quick black eyes darted along the rows. He frowned momentarily when he saw Cora and her paramour sitting directly across from him on the aisle. But Gavin Field was scowling straight before him, seemingly absorbed in an inspection of the thick neck of Police Commissioner Ingram. Then Brandt's discolored teeth parted in a grin as he spied Gats Perino ahead of him, bowing to the police commissioner in the suavest, Mayfair mode. The fellow had nerve, Brandt reflected. Brande admired nerve.

The producer enjoyed a reputation along the Rialto as a hard man. But underneath a certain blustering swagger that passed for fearlessness in some quarters, he was anything but fashioned in the mold of heroes. From his earliest days he had had a cold clammy horror of the dark. It was common gossip along Broadway that the lights in his apartment were kept blazing all night. He was most at ease in noisy raucous company.

Crafty In Business

Paradoxically, in his business deals, he seldom came out into the open. He never fought back when a subterfuge would do. His word was good until a better offer came along. When deals materialized he assumed the credit with a noisy trumpeting. And if they didn't he was an adept at passing the buck. He was a brilliant showman. Brandt was about to lean forward to whisper something to Lansdowne who sat in front of him, when the house lights went out. The curtain rose on the third act. "Phantom Fingers" was a first pay. It proceeded to unravel delectably the coils that had been twisted in the first two acts. The author, Martin Ellis, had made deft use of all the mechanical devices calculated to quicken interest. It was a skilled piece of stage craftsmanship, and the dialogue flowed along with the polished ease of the veteran pen. Ellis had a wide reputation as a writer of detective fiction. He was known to be friendly with the Manning family. Rumor had it that he had been persuaded by Mrs. Manning to write the play expressly for her daughter's debut.

The choice of suspects gradually narrowed on the stage, but the attention of the first night house was held steady. There still remained two major possibilities to baffle them. A nice point was arising in the matter of an alibi.

An Old Idea

"Please take those seats which you occupied on the night of the crime." The stage detective had thought of an idea. It was not a particularly novel idea. In fact, it had occurred to some four hundred and seventy-five stage counterparts before him in the brief but lurid history of the detective drama. Still the playwright had invested the famous situation with a commendable flavor of suspense.

George Lansdowne pulled out his watch and groped for his hat. He knew his mystery play routine by heart and he had an eleven-thirty deadline to catch. Brandt nodded to him as he made his way quickly up the aisle. Soft racket these critics had, reflected the producer. Free seats, easy hours, power to make or mar. In half an hour some poison pen could decimate the result of weeks of arduous rehearsal.

"Please don't move. I am going to turn the lights out. I believe we won't have far to go now." The stage detective's voice came suave and significant. Julius Brandt twisted uncomfortably in his seat. Nervous giggles of anticipation seized the female portion of the audience. The house went dark. Pitch dark. Complete, unfathomable blackness.

For a few seconds the silence on the stage remained unbroken. The tense expectant stillness transmitted itself electrically to the audience. Two shots rang out from the stage. From the footlights there mounted a wild scream, a woman's voice lifted in an abandon of naked fear. It quivered across the hushed scene like a wave of panic. The hardened members of the audience shrank back in their seats, gripping their arm-rests, an ice-cold feeling enameled on their backs.

Embarrassed Loup

The stage was bright again. A ripple of self-conscious laughter that was half relief swept across the house. On the stage the guilty party, bleeding elaborately, stood unmoved. The stage detective was stepping on hand-cuffs. The ingrate was being revived from a mock faint, reasonably safe in the assumption that on the morrow she would be hailed as a sinner with few peers on the legitimate stage.

Suddenly, without warning, a second scream rang out. Down front, a woman rose violently to her feet. Her hand was clutched to her throat, her eyes dilated with horror. She screamed again. It was almost as though the house were throwing back an echo to the stage of that piercing cry which, a few brief moments before had undermined the audience's morale. And yet totally unprepared, there seemed in the second cry an even more flesh-creeping resonance, an even starker ecstacy of fear.

Heads turned quickly. Necks craned forward. A loud indulgent laugh suddenly broke out from the front rows and spread across the house as the audience recognized in the apparently distracted woman the figure of Margaret Manning. Part of the show, of course. They chuckled knowingly. In their eagerness for new developments few of the spectators noticed that the actors were casting sidelong glances over the footlights, that they were speaking their lines with more than a suspicion of uncertainty.

Margaret Manning had stopped screaming. She stood still as a statue, her face frozen in a look of horror, her eyes riveted on the figure at her left. In the gleam of light from the stage, those nearest her came under the mesmerizing sway of her startling coal-black eyes.

The whispers faded. Above the drone of conversation on the stage, the clear, resonant voice of Mrs. Manning cut across the auditorium like the last of a whip.

"My God! she cried, one hand still clutching her throat. 'He's dead!'"

The body of Julius Brandt lay slumped in the aisle seat, his white shirt front drenched in blood. In two strides the police commissioner had crossed the aisle. He drew back aghast.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

INDIANS' NEW MANAGER
FORSEES WINNING CLUB

HAPPY to be back in baseball and certain that his new club can be made into a winner, Walter Johnson last night left his home near Washington for Cleveland to take over his new job as manager of the Indians. He was given the managerial job Friday and succeeds Roger Peckinpaugh in that capacity tomorrow.

Reached at his home in Alta Vista, Md., a suburb of the capital, Johnson, former manager of the Washington Senators, said: "I have been so busy on my place here that I haven't had time for baseball this year and I haven't even seen the Cleveland team in action. I intend to familiarize myself with the players and their form before deciding whether any changes should be made."

"I know the club has some good talent and can be whipped into a winner. That's what I was hired to do and I'm going to give the task my best efforts."

JOHNSON'S appointment is greeted with enthusiasm by his great throng of friends throughout baseball. One of baseball's immortals and ranked among the game's greatest pitchers of all time, "The Big Train" should have no trouble getting along with his players. A good disciplinarian, Johnson also is a sociable, likeable chap that has friends in every section of the country.

The St. Louis Browns will be the Indians' opponents on Johnson's first appearance at the Cleveland municipal stadium. The tribe has dropped five consecutive games and is now in fifth place.

THERE ARE MANY who are inclined to believe that Roger Peckinpaugh was given anything but a square break by the Indian management. Never a great favorite with the writer, Peckinpaugh nevertheless did a good job as manager of the Indians, gathering together a flock of youngsters and made a ball club that ranked among the best in the American circuit.

Because he wasn't able to produce a championship aggregation out of the young bloods when, in the first place, the team wasn't of championship caliber, Peckinpaugh has been kicked out of a job. Millionaire owners of the tribe didn't give him any cooperation as far as finding better players to help the team out of its slump—they took the cheapest way out, fired Peck.

The Indians haven't had many breaks this year, the pitchers have been hurting good, very good ball, but hurlers of rival clubs have proven slightly superior. Too often Cleveland scribes have panned Indian batters for their failure to hit—they forgot that the other pitchers have been giving them the apple out of the park. It was noticed that when Cleveland hurlers won on fine mound performances that these same writers gave them plenty of credit but never once mentioned the weakness of the other team's batters.

And, speaking of pitching, does forget, Earl McNamee, class underhand slab artist who pitched the Mullins Foremen's club to nine straight victories and the championship of the Salem Class A league this year.

McNamee, a popular lad with fans and players, hasn't been handed the bouquet the merits because too many think that most of his games are won because of the brilliant support given him by Bob Campbell & Co. That helps a lot, but not anyone could go in there and hurt a team to nine straight wins. His support wasn't of the marvelous brand in every one of those contests.

Looking over the list of pitchers, the league doesn't have a big supply of star mound artists this year, but ranking right beside or close to McNamee are Wayne (Muscles) Russell of the Schafer Billiards, Dale Ritchie, Famous Dairy strikeline specialist, and Lee Christen, American League.

The second round in the league starts next week, and every one of these rival nine cherubs will be after Mullins' scalp. Everybody likes a winner, but when victories become so plentiful that they approach the monstrous, fans rebel. That's the case with the Foremen's club, so Pat Boien, Jim Fitzpatrick, Bob Campbell and the rest of the team's stars better prepare for a barrage of fan tirade that will have their ears a deep red before many days have come and gone.

What The Stars Did Yesterday

JOE CRONIN, Senators—Hit double and two singles against Boston.

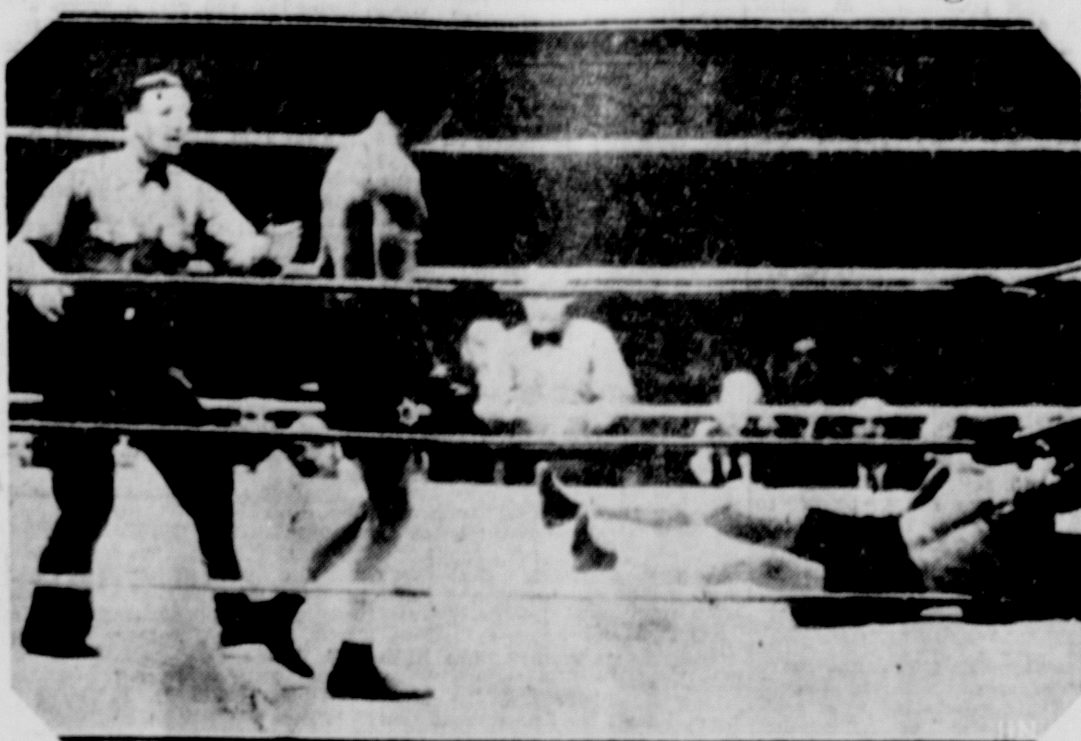

STEVE SWETONIC, Pirates—Blanked Reds with six hits, winning 2-0.

LUKE APPLING, White Sox—Hit homer in 14th to beat Tigers, 10-9.

TEX CARLETON, Cardinals—Held Cubs to even hits to win seventh victory of season.

TONY LAZZERI, Yankees—Hit homer with two on base to give Yanks winning margin over Athletics.

Ringside Scenes As Baer Beats Schmeling

There goes Max Schmeling! The former heavyweight champion is seen floundering on the ring floor in the tenth and last round of his bout with Max Baer in Yankee stadium, New York. Shortly after this knockdown the referee stopped the fight and awarded Baer a technical knockout.

Still somewhat groggy from the beating he received, Max Schmeling, right, is shown congratulating his conqueror, Max Baer, following the finish of their bout in Yankee stadium, New York. Baer is winner on a technical knockout in the tenth and now will meet the winner of the Sharkey-Carnera title bout, June 29.

NEW CHIEFTAIN TO TAKE CHARGE OF CLUB SUNDAY

"Big Train" Confers With Billy Evans; Plan To Strengthen Team

JOHN BURNETT MAY BE SENT TO BOSTON

Vosmik, Morgan, Hudlin Also Named In Rumors of Probable Trades

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, June 10—Cleveland seethed with baseball talk today, talk largely concerned with player trades likely to follow the firing of one manager and hiring of another.

Walter Perry Johnson, the new pilot, was aboard an early arriving train, detailed to start immediately the task of rekindling the Cleveland hopes for a pennant this year.

Peckinpaugh Released
The former teammate and close friend he succeeded Roger Peckinpaugh, enjoyed for the moment his release from managerial worries, saying he hoped eventually to return to baseball with another major league team.

"It's sort of tough," Peckinpaugh said, as he started the first round of golf he has played since the baseball season started, "but at least I know where I am. That's more than I've known for the last five years."

He spoke of a possible fishing trip. Will Confer With Evans
Meanwhile, Johnson was called to confer with General Manager Billy Evans and draft a program that will strengthen the team that has lost 16 of its last 25 games. He has not seen the Indians in action this year, but it generally was supposed he would engineer some trades before the deadline for swapping players next Thursday.

One swap considered probable, would send John Burnett, shortstop, to the Boston Red Sox in exchange for Lloyd Brown, southpaw pitcher, and an outfielder.

Other Deals Pending
Other deals reported under consideration would involve players from the Browns, Yankees and Senators. Joe Vosmik, left fielder, Eddie Morgan, first baseman and Willie Hudlin, pitcher, are among the Cleveland athletes frequently mentioned as likely to be sent elsewhere.

In announcing the appointment of Johnson, President Alva Bradley said: "It is with great regret that the board of directors of the Cleveland Baseball Co. finds it necessary to change managers at this time."

For five years every effort has been made to build a winning team in Cleveland. Roger Peckinpaugh has worked hard and done everything in his power to make a winner. He is a Cleveland boy and it is unfortunate at this time to make this change.

"We have given very careful thought to his successor and have decided to employ Walter Johnson as manager. His experience, both as a player and manager, should be most helpful in Cleveland Saturday but will not take charge of the team until Sunday, June 11.

"The game Saturday, June 10, will be in charge of Bob Falk, coach."

Official Introduction Sunday
Johnson thus will be officially introduced to Cleveland fans in Sunday's game with the Browns, after which the Indians will depart on a short trip before returning to engage the eastern clubs in a two-week stand at the stadium.

Kelley Third, Campbell Fourth
Sidinger has connected for 12 hits in 25 official trips to the plate while Greenisen, Hardware pitcher and outfielder, has 11 safeties in 24 times at bat.

Joe M. Kelley (American Legion), 1932 league hitting champ, is in third place with .455 while Robert Campbell (Mullins), who lost 77 points in the last 10 days, is fourth with .423.

Only two other league batters are hitting in the coveted 400 rankings. They are Everett Rich (Legion) and Arthur Borton (Mullins).

GLENVIEW, Ill., June 10 — It couldn't be done so the young giant killer from Omaha, Johnny Goodman, did it.

He couldn't beat Bobby Jones in the national amateur at Pebble Beach back in 1929, but he did. Nobody could touch Tommy Armour in a single 18-hole round on the Silver Scot had boomed in with a 68 to take a five-shot lead in the first skirmish of the Current National Open Golf Championship, but Johnny did and more. He passed him, not by one shot but by two.

Equals Sarazen's Record
Nobody would ever equal Gene Sarazen's record of 66 in a national open championship, especially over such a long, tough layout as North Shore with its 6,927 yards of narrow fairways and yawning traps, but the 23-year old ex-caddy from Omaha did.

Johnny could fall right into a trap today, far out of the big championship drive over the final 36-holes, but the galleries, who watched him yesterday never will forget how he fired that 66 with a wild, cheering throng of 4,000, among it his girl friend from home, charging at his heels.

So magical was his touch with the putter that he needed only 26 shots on the greens, his iron was masterful and his nerves encased in ice water. They won't forget how he arched his niblick shot in from 40 yards against the flag pole for an eagle tree on the 511-yard fifteenth and how, with his tee shot in the rough on the final hole, he banded a five iron shot that almost dropped into the cup.

Has Big Lead
Johnny had a two-shot lead over Armour and a wide 10-stroke lead over Gene Sarazen, the defending champ, today but the battle was only half over. Several notoriously tough fighters were close behind. Armour, although he played raggedly yesterday to come up with a 75, was still a dangerous foe. At 144 was Joe Kirkwood of trick shot fame, who shot a 76 for the next best second round score. Olin Dutra, big national professional champion from Los Angeles, threatened from fourth position on the tide of a 71 that gave him a 153-hole today.

At 144 was Joe Kirkwood of trick shot fame, who shot a 76 for the next best second round score. Olin Dutra, big national professional champion from Los Angeles, threatened from fourth position on the tide of a 71 that gave him a 153-hole today. At 148 was Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., had 147 with Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis, a 71 shoofer yesterday. At 148 were Mortie Dutra and T. Philip Perkins, while in a traffic jam around the 148 mark were a band of sharpshooters like MacDonald Smith, Leo Diegel, Walter Hagen, Johnny Revolta, Phil Perkins and Bob Shave. Walter Hagen and Henri Cluet, Mortie Dutra and Willie Klein, Johnny Goodman and MacDonald Smith.

Tommy Armour and Denamore Shute.

Gene Sarazen and Horton Smith, step in their brilliant climb. They began to "click" in championship style when they obtained shortstop Leo Durocher and now have won 16 of their last 19 games. They seldom have collected fewer than ten hits a game. And Dizzy Dean, Bill Hallahan and Tex Carleton have been turning in mound victories with great regularity.

It was Carleton's turn yesterday and he halted the Chicago clouters with seven hits while his teammates doubled that figure.

Pittsburgh's Pirates staged a comeback in the other National league game, by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 2-0 in a mound duel between Steve Swetonic and Paul Derringer.

ANOTHER DEFAULT STILL HAVE GOLD AMERICAN DOLLAR

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1933 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NEWS from Paris suggests "an other default in Paris on the debt to the United States," and the news is probably accurate. Britain's cabinet discussed payment to the United States, but reached no decision.

Certain gentlemen think that the worst misfortune is to lose your rabbit's foot. Europe, which enjoyed the habit of drawing gold out of the United States, predicts that this country will suffer misfortune because it has lost its financial "rabbit's foot" of gold.

As a matter of fact, the country is only "off the gold basis" it still has its gold rabbit's foot tucked away in Washington, and it's the biggest gold rabbit's foot on earth.

IN SPITE of Europe's fears and predictions, the dollar yesterday refused to drop lower. It went up a little. Those that have been selling American dollars abroad would have stopped their foolishness if they had attended a luncheon given by Mr. Berkowitz, manager of the American Weekly, to a dozen heads of important advertising firms in the United States.

Mr. Berkowitz, interested in showing advertisers that this country still has money to spend, presented facts, based on government reports.

MR. WOODIN, secretary of the treasury, needed for Uncle Sam $1,000,000,000 on five-year notes, paying 2 7/8 per cent interest, plus $400,000,000 of "nine-month certificates" paying less than 1 per cent. These government debts, for the first time, are payable in "lawful money," which means nice paper, not gold.

Nevertheless, Mr. Woodin was offered $5,000,000,000 when he only asked for $1,000,000,000. Somebody seems to think our lawful money is sound and that President Roosevelt knows what he is doing.

IN 1932, Americans spent in retail buying $3,500,000,000. That was buying in retail stores, not doctors' bills or family spending. The exports of the whole world amounted to only $12,150,000,000, little more than one-third of our retail business.

Americans have in their savings banks $24,285,000,000. All the savings banks in the world, outside of this country, have only $17,000,000,000 deposits!

Also, the people of the United States, appreciating their own value, carry $109,000,000,000 life insurance. The rest of the world carries only $33,000,000,000 of life insurance.

Whoever worries about the American dollar, that can buy anything in this kind of a country, is wasting his worry.

A distinguished French banker, deploring the weakness of the dollar, says, "We are all in for a showdown of strength," meaning "money strength."

Two Leading Ladies

Montgomery, popular actor that he is, has assembled a fine supporting cast headed by Betty Eilers, Madge Evans, Eugene Pallette, C. Henry Gordon, Jean Parker and Ivan Lebedeff.

Described as a glittering panorama of New York life from Battery Park to Harlem, "Made on Broadway" tells the story of a man about town who finds himself beaten by a girl he has befriended.

Montgomery plays the role of Jeff Bidwell, "wise guy" and debonaire gambler who hoodwinks society and reaps his success on Broadway.

Ramon Navarro Is Starred

Tuesday and Wednesday bring another popular and most talented actor to the State—Ramon Navarro in "The Barbarian."

This romantic tale, laid in the colorful, atmospheric background of the Nile river and Egyptian desert, enacts the story of a resourceful rogue ostensibly occupied in the business of guiding tourists through the picturesque pyramid sight-seeing country, but more subtly engaged in the activity of impressing wealthy ladies of his charms.

Into the picture enters Myrna Loy as a young English girl and from there on the young guide changes his methods for he is really in love.

Navarro sings several ballads and he has a pleasant voice that is ideally suited to such romantic backgrounds such as are in this film.

It re-enacts the events of America over a period of two decades, the drama and tragedy, the pathos and humor the grandeur and stupidity of the most amazing period in history—those as seen through the eyes of an average American family.

The story opens in 1916, swings up through years to the present day and continues onward to the future, venturing a prediction as to what is in store for America during the next few months.
